WHEELING, JUNE 14, 1892.

THE approaching contest is rendered especially important by reason of the industrial and financial policies of the Government being at stake. The popular decision on these issues is of great moment and will be of far-reaching consequence.—James G. Blaine.

A Winning Ticket.

If the Republicans of Ohio county do their duty from now until November the ticket nominated by the convention yesterday will be elected from top to bottom. It would be very hard indeed to select a stronger one, or one which could command a heartier support of the entire party.

Every man selected has elements of strength peculiar to himself, and all combined compose an invincible ticket. They were selected with deliberation and with the aim to do what the party would endorse. The harmony and enthusiasm which prevailed throughout the convention indicated the earnestness and good feeling that exists among the Republicans of Ohio county this year, and the united front they will present to the enemy.

With the selection of a good ticket the duty of the party does not end. Earnest work and constant vigilance, together with perfect organization, no matter how popular the candidates are. The INTELLIGENCER believes that past experience has taught Ohio county Republicans to appreciate this fact, and they are alive to the situation.

The county committee should get to work immediately, and, aided by the rank and file, make a strong, steady pull for success. Success in the state depends much on what Ohio county does. The importance of this fact cannot be overvalued. Four years ago a single Republican member of the legislature from this county would have insured a Republican United States senator from West Virginia; prevented the outrage by which the Republican governor's right to the office was stolen from him; made it impossible for the senatorial districts to be gerrymandered in the interests of the Democratic party, and made a Republican victory this year even more certain than it is.

Thus, it may be seen how important Ohio county's action is. We have the votes. Let us organize, get them out and carry the county for the whole ticket from President to constables.

A Good Man's Error.

The INTELLIGENCER regrets that National Committeeman Scott is quoted in the Democratic organ of this city as criticizing the character of Mr. Hart's Minneapolis dispatches to his paper, the INTELLIGENCER. It is Senator Scott's privilege to criticize, as it is the INTELLIGENCER's privilege to point out to him that he does Mr. Hart and this newspaper an injustice, which, no doubt, is unintentional. Mr. Scott is quoted as saying:

"I suppose you noticed, that Mr. Hart by Mr. Hart's telegrams largely conducted the ceremonies tending to the election of Harrison. There appeared to be no other member of the West Virginia delegation that was doing much in the way of important work on several committees. Now, while I appreciate the efforts of Mr. Hart, and believe that he rendered valuable services, still there were others equally as busy and equally as effective. There was John A. Hutchinson, of Parkersburg, who was a member of the committee on resolutions, and took active part in forming the platform of the party. While I do not care to speak of myself, other than to show the position of the delegation in general, as a member of the national committee I was one of the seven that formed the sub-committee to perfect the temporary organization with Matt Quay as chairman, and John C. New as secretary, and Delegate George M. Bowen was appointed on the committee to wait on the President to notify him of his nomination. Yes, there were a few incidental affairs that Mr. Hart did not attend to."

Had Mr. Scott read his favorite newspaper more closely before talking to the Democratic Register he never would have made the above assertions, for we know him to be a man who would not do any one an intentional injustice. The "incidental affairs" which he claims "Mr. Hart did not attend to" were, in fact, attended to and given due prominence in that gentleman's dispatches, and in not a single instance were Mr. Hart's own actions exploited or referred to. The only mention of Mr. Hart's part in the proceedings were in the Associated Press reports, and in the resolutions of endorsement unanimously adopted by the West Virginia delegation.

As to whether the editor of the INTELLIGENCER overdraw the situation at Minneapolis or not, we refer Senator Scott to the result of the convention, which was precisely what the INTELLIGENCER's special dispatches predicted it would be from the start.

The Democratic Fix.

Colonel John A. Cockerill, editor of the New York Advertiser, an Independent Democratic paper, is an accomplished politician and a Democrat from away back. He seems to take a gloomy view of the Democratic situation since the nomination of Harrison, and is frank enough to say so in the columns of his paper. He solemnly declares that it will be folly for the Democratic party to assume that Benjamin Harrison will be an easy candidate to defeat, and proceeds to give some logical reasons why he thinks so.

Having made clear what Democrats will find out later, namely, that President Harrison is a strong candidate, Colonel Cockerill proceeds to drop a chunk of ice down the back of the Democratic party by first asserting that Cleveland cannot carry New York as against Harrison, and then declaring that the party will not be able to escape the calamity of Cleveland's nomination at Chicago.

Wisdom, says the colonel, suggests that Cleveland and Hill should be both dropped and another man taken up. But, alas, where is he?

Gorman, Boies, Palmer, Carlisle, Whitney, Morrison, Campbell are the only men in sight to select from, says Colonel Cockerill, and not one of them could make as good a showing in New York as Cleveland.

If this is true, and the colonel is right in saying Cleveland cannot carry the state, what a fix the Democratic party is in, to be sure!

All Uniting.

An example of the good grace with which the anti-Harrison men accepted defeat is shown in the action of those members of the Pennsylvania delegation who went to Minneapolis to boom Blaine. They left home singing a campaign song full of Blaine sentiment and sang themselves hoarse on the trip. Yesterday they returned and passed through Pittsburgh still singing, but to a revised meter, as follows:

We are for the nominee,
He will get there, don't you see;
Pennsylvania is the stuff,
But the boys feel awful tough.
Boom, ta-ra, etc.

Whitelaw Reid for second place,
He will help us in the race.
Won't they make a dandy pair
For the Presidential chair?
Boom, ta-ra, etc.

The verses are more expressive than poetical or elegant. However, they tell an eloquent story of true blue Republicanism, which the chairman emphasized when he said: "The convention factions are already uniting for harmonious campaign work."

A Scheme That Failed.

An attempt to put the Central Labor Union of New York on record as favoring free trade was defeated. It was a neat Democratic scheme in the form of a resolution endorsing the publication in the Congressional Record of free trade documents as parts of speeches delivered on the floor of the house. The resolution was to the effect that the dissemination of such literature "would likely be productive of sound views as to the effect of tariff on the wages earned by the wage workers of our country," and was tabled by a majority vote. The labor unions of the country are not ready to endorse free trade and never will be.

The Cleveland Leader shows a proper appreciation of President Harrison when it says: "He has kept great counselors by his side and not only not been hidden under their shadow, but unmistakably grown out from under it. Today he stands as a national figure of the first rank, a captain under whose cool, thoughtful and safe leadership the Republican hosts can go confidently forward to victory."

KEEP your eye on that man McKinley from now until 1896. Twice in succession has his loyalty to the man he was supporting caused him to check movements that might have resulted in his capturing the prize himself, but in '96, if the signs of the times are correct, McKinley will be the name that will be sung from one side of the continent to the other. Keep your eye on McKinley.

Ohio county Republicanism isn't at a discount this year, as witness one of the best attended and most enthusiastic county conventions ever held—and that, too, when there were no contests to bring out a large crowd. All were inspired wholly by a desire to do the best thing for the party.

It is said that the President is likely to select Robert T. Lincoln to succeed Mr. Blaine as secretary of state. The rumor may not be well founded, but if it is, it will be welcomed by Republicans everywhere as another evidence of the President's wisdom.

The young Republicans of Wheeling are setting a good example to the older heads. They are organizing and preparing to take their part in the great battle to be fought.

PERSONAL POINTS.

It is semi-officially announced that the university of Oxford, England, proposes to confer on Bishop Potter, of New York, the honorary degree of doctor of divinity. Although the degree of sacred theology (S. T. D.) has been presented to several members of the American episcopate, the most recent instance being that of Bishop Doane, of Albany, last year, doctor of divinity is a distinction which has only been bestowed on two other American bishops of the Anglican church. In 1777, Bishop Seabury, first bishop of Connecticut and of the American church was thus honored, while in 1887 Bishop Whitehouse, second bishop of Illinois, received a similar mark of favor from the English university.

Colonel W. B. Remy, judge advocate general of the navy, who was retired with the rank of colonel of the marine corps last week, had been in that organization over thirty years. He served on several stations during and immediately after the civil war, and in 1870 he was made judge advocate general of the marine corps, serving as such for three years. He was then graduated from the Columbian university law school, having improved his residence in Washington to take a course therein, and he was admitted to the bar. He was commissioned judge advocate general of the navy with the rank of colonel in 1880, being reappointed in 1884 and 1888.

The dress worn by Mrs. Warner Miller on the occasion of her recent presentation at court was a gown of the palest blue satin, made on princess and draped over a petticoat of white satin, both being embroidered with crystals and pearls. This train was of yellow satin, brocaded in faint shades of blue. The presentation dress of Miss Edith Van Buren, the President's grandniece, was a creation of Worth, literally and figuratively speaking. It was of the richest white satin embroidered with silver and crystal, with a train similarly embroidered and falling from the left shoulder. The bodice was of pale pink veiled with costly lace, yellow from age.

General Longstreet is now seventy-two years of age and a man of patriarchal aspect. His hair and whiskers are white as snow, his face ruddy, and his figure tall and erect. He is deaf, as the result of a bullet wound, and one of his arms is disabled. He lives a life of primeval simplicity, going to bed early, and rising at 5 o'clock in the morning to walk in his vineyard.

The archdukes of the reigning house of Austria become of age on the twentieth anniversary of their birth. The attainment of his majority by Archduke Joseph Ferdinand Salvator, son of the grand duke of Tuscany, a few days ago, was celebrated with considerable pomp at Vienna. The young man is a pupil of the military academy in the Austrian capital.

Dr. Charles Ray Palmer, of Bridgeport, Conn., has given to Yale a scholarship of $10,000 as a memorial of his son, Alfred Barnes Palmer, '92, who died recently. The scholarship will pay the beneficiary's tuition and give him $150 in addition.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

Colorado women will probably be represented numerously at the World's Fair. At least, many of them are making applications for space, and are preparing exhibits. In the fine arts department twenty-three women—twenty artists and three sculptors—have applied for space. The work of some of them has attracted favorable attention in art exhibitions both abroad and in this country. Wallpaper, carpet and portiere designing, decorated china, wood carving, embroidery, literature, etc., are among the lines in which women are intending exhibitors. Copies of the works of every Colorado author are to be exhibited in the state building.

An exhibit showing the press resources and accomplishments of Michigan is contemplated by the World's Fair board of that state, and it is believed that the Michigan Press Association will undertake the preparation of it. It is proposed to procure copies of all the papers published in the state and bind them, the dailies in one volume and the weeklies in another and the monthlies in still another. It is also proposed to have photographs of many of the best known editors in the state and of newspaper offices, equipments, etc.

A miniature model of a typical western farm, complete in every detail, will be exhibited in the Washington state building at the World's Fair. Among other exhibits will be a collection of specimens of all the species of birds, fish and animals to be found in the state. The interior of the building will be decorated in large part by the women of the state.

Rousesville Wildman, United States consul at Singapore, Straits Settlements, has written to Walker Fearn, chief of the foreign affairs department, that he hopes to have one of the best colonial exhibitions ever sent out by that colony. His highness, the sultan of Johore, has signified his intention to take active interest in the representation to be made at the fair.

Among the numerous congresses which will be held at Chicago during the World's Fair is on water commerce. It is believed that no difficulty will be experienced in making the congress international in character, as water transportation is a subject of supreme interest to nearly every nation. John C. Dore, of Chicago, is chairman of the committee which is promoting the proposed congress.

The postal facilities and service at the World's Fair will constitute a part of the U. S. government exhibit and, naturally, will be made as near perfection as possible. The expense estimated to be necessary to accomplish this is $163,047. Postmaster-General Wannamaker has asked that an appropriation of that sum be made by the government.

Great Britain's building at the World's Fair is now in process of erection. The structures of a number of other foreign nations will be begun within ten days or two weeks, as commissioners are on the grounds preparing to inaugurate work.

A very fine collection of tropical plants, including some of the largest specimens, will be sent from Jamaica to the World's Fair. The arrangements for their transportation have already been made.

JEFFERSON COUNTY DEMOCRATS

Meet at Steubenville—Cleveland is Only Mildly Endorsed.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 13.—The Cleveland forces were completely routed in today's Democratic county convention, but rallied later on and managed to get a resolution through by close shaving after a bitter fight that only accorded the "stuffed prophet" prefatory praise.

Delegates were also selected to the congressional convention, which will be called to meet in this city some time in August. Hon. Daniel McConville has written here saying he was not a candidate for Congress, nor did he want to go as delegate to the national convention. Gen. A. J. Pearson, of Woodfield, Monroe county, is the only candidate for Congress, and will probably be nominated by acclamation. W. H. Hunter, one of the editors of the Gazette, of this city, and vice president of the Scotch-Irish congress, is spoken of favorably as a candidate for Congress. The convention instructed the delegates to the state convention to support George W. McCook, of this city, a son of the late Col. G. W. McCook, who was once the Democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, and a direct descendant of the "fighting McCooks," for delegate to the national convention. The only other names mentioned for delegate from this district is A. W. Kennon, of St. Clairsville.
